What is a Care Plan?

A Care Plan is a document that outlines:

- a person's care needs, goals and preferences whether in residential aged care or their own home;
- the services they will receive to meet those needs; and
- who will provide the services and when.

You or your legal representative will be involved in discussions with your aged care provider in developing your Care Plan. It is essential that your Care Plan is individually tailored to reflect your capabilities, your needs and your wishes.

Your aged care provider, your doctor or other health care practitioner/s will consult with you to update your Care Plan when changes are necessary.

Whether it is a paper document or stored on a computer, your Care Plan should be readily accessible to you and/or your legal representative, care staff, medical staff, doctor and other health care practitioners (e.g. physiotherapist, podiatrist, dentist).

Under the Aged Care Act 1997, all aged care providers need to maintain and update your Care Plan, providing evidence that you were consulted on the care you wish to receive.

Reference: Australian Government, Department of Health, What are Care Plans?

Your Care Plan:

- contains details about your medical, physical, social, emotional, lifestyle and spiritual care needs;
- outlines how you wish services to be delivered; and
- can also contain information about family arrangements (e.g. who visits you regularly, emergency contacts and information about Advance Care Directive).

What you can do?

■ Provide complete and accurate information:

Let your aged care provider know about prescription and non-prescription medications that you are taking. Inform your aged care provider about any other health or well-being services that you want to continue (e.g. massage therapy, exercise classes).

■ Offer your opinions:

Talk with your aged care provider, your doctor or other health care practitioners (e.g. physiotherapist, podiatrist, dentist) about how you think your care can be managed.

■ Formulate some goals:

Consult with your aged care provider, your doctor or other health care practitioner/s about your mobility, personal skills and independent goals, needs and preferences.

■ Make your preferences clear:

Inform your aged care provider the care and support, including emotional, you wish your family to provide, should be included. Provide information about any religious practices, cultural traditions or customs that you wish to abide by.

■ Provide information about the activities that you want to continue/commence:

Talk with your aged care provider about any club or social/church groups that you wish to remain connected with. Let your aged care provider know if there is a new activity you would like to commence.

■ Review and update your Care Plan:

Ensure that your Care Plan is accurate, and you have provided consent before being signed. Ask for your Care Plan to be reviewed and updated every 12 months, or whenever you wish to make amendments due to change in your personal circumstances.

If you have a concern regarding your aged care service or your Care Plan doesn't reflect your personal needs, you may contact ARAS to obtain information to self-advocate, or seek the support of an Advocate who will represent you with your consent. If an Interpreter is required, ARAS is able to arrange free interpreting services.
